BRICK FINDER

Set Your Bricks Free

Rediscover what you can build with the bricks you already own

From the collection to the next build

Brick Finder, founded by Mike Dunn of Magness Enterprises LLC, introduces a simple invitation: Set Your Bricks Free. The platform is designed to help builders organise the pieces they own and explore possibilities for their next build. Personal inventory and build discovery connect a loose-brick collection with ideas for using it again.

How BrickVision fits

BrickVision uses multi-view, layered computer vision to support brick identification. Multiple views contribute information to the recognition process; suggestions still need user review. Results depend on the pieces, image quality and capture conditions. Brick Finder does not promise perfect recognition or identification of every piece.

A place to create and display

Brick Studio brings together 1,800+ interactive 3D models. Minifigure Maker offers another creative outlet, while personal 3D display rooms provide a way to arrange and showcase digital creations. These features support the broader goal of helping families, collectors and builders enjoy their collections.

Offline and on-device by design

Brick Finder's design philosophy prioritises work on the user's device and offline access. Offline use depends on the supported app version, device and locally available content. Downloads, purchases and connected services require internet access. This introduction does not imply identical features on every platform.

Published launch pricing

The website currently advertises an annual launch membership at US$2.50, compared with the regular US$9.99 per year. The launch rate is retained while membership stays continuously active. It also advertises 1,776 Lifetime Founder memberships at US$17.76 as a one-time payment, with availability to be confirmed. These are published US-dollar offers, not confirmed local app-store prices. See the website for current availability and terms.
